back into the community

The heart of Saskatchewan is its kind and generous people. The Emergency Response Fund for Community Needs at the South Saskatchewan Community Foundation has built a lifeline for charities to help with urgent needs. Through this Fund, the community has come together and has raised over $1 million to assist many organizations who are doing tireless work throughout the COVID-19 pandemic. The Fund's base of $500,000 was made available from the estate of a generous founding member of the Foundation.

In a time of uncertainty for all of us, Saskatchewan people generously rallied to support the needs of our most vulnerable populations. Charities who deliver emergency-type services continued to help by working tirelessly through these heightened emotionally and financially stressful times. Funds assisted in the areas of food security, shelter shortages, helping with children's needs and those needs of the most vulnerable populations.

SSCF provided funds to charities right across south Saskatchewan, from Swift Current, Estevan, Oxbow, Regina, Broadview and Moose Jaw so they could collaborate with their communities to provide programs and services in a different way. Such programs included providing virtual mental health support, purchasing food for single moms and elders, providing play equipment to toddlers, having resources available to families in rural areas, computers to isolated students in rural areas, diapers and cleaning supplies to shelters, and so much more. On their behalf and the people they serve, we thank you!

More than 50 applications were received and reviewed by a team of community stakeholders. For a list of recipients, please visit our website at sscf.ca
